I am looking for a job in IT - project management OR junior developer (JAVA or WEB - Front-End) even though my background is in business management.

WHY? I had some life changing moment (time) in my life, so I reconsidered my life. I used to run after money and worked 24x7 for almost 8 years without breaks and run into health problems. Now I am good, and I spend more time with my family.

IT has always attracted me and now I am learning JAVA and WEB programming.

I see IT as future, and I want to be part of the future. In IT one (or team) can create something that can be later used by unlimited number of people and benefit many lives - I admire that. I also want to show example to my kids that a person at any age can change his/her life for better and life-work balance is important. Money will come.

Project manager performing various roles to ensure positive result

My role as project manager was to do everything from attracting client to ensuring desired positive result – realize project and receive funding. Besides project management I was performing various other roles as well - like business analyst, product owner, financial analyst and other. In all roles I was working closely with stakeholders and managing team accordingly. I have experience working with innovation, IT, export, training, modernization, infrastructure, energy-efficiency, and other projects. I was working Agile way applying ideas from Scrum.

I got GREAT EXPERIENCE!
